

Regions and Cities Book Series

Series Editors: Ron Martin, University of Cambridge, UK; Gernot Grabher, University of Bonn, Germany; Maryann Feldman, University of Georgia, USA, Gillian Bristow, Cardiff University, UK.

Regions and Cities is an international, interdisciplinary series that provides authoritative analyses of the new significance of regions and cities for economic, social and cultural development, and public policy experimentation. The series seeks to combine theoretical and empirical insights with constructive policy debate and critically engages with formative processes and policies in regional and urban studies.

The editors are keen to receive new proposals for books on the topics of contemporary relevance (e.g. city-regions, sustainable cities and regions, low carbon economies, culture and creativity etc), and would particularly welcome contributions from early career researchers.
