1. Programme Structure

The programme has a robust and coherent structure allowing students a logical progression

2. Academic Standards

The academic standards of the programme are high and commensurate with Cardiff University's reputation

3. The Assessment Process

Assessment is robust. The formative assessment process can be seen as a benchmark in good practice.

4. Year-on-Year Comments

The module I was asked to examine – SIR 056 – was clearly well-taught with students being exposed to contemporary literature and thoughts around public policy. The handbook was clear and concise and provided a useful and informative tool from which the students could begin their work. The student work was of a good standard and demonstrated an ability to mix theory with reference to practice. I was happy to confirm the marks.

The feedback, both formative and summative, was of a very high standard and it was clear where the students had used the formative feedback to improve their final submissions.

In sum this is a good module, well taught and equally well received by the students.

5. Preparation / Induction Activity (for new External Examiners only)

6. Noteworthy Practice and Enhancement

Formative assessment is a key part of the success of the cohorts I have examined.

7. Appointment Overview (for retiring External Examiners only)
