4. Year-on-Year Comments

The anomaly I noted in last year's report in appears to have been just that o this year I want to reiterate what I wrote in my first report in relation to the quality of the work I have seen, which is clearly indicative of the excellent teaching being performed, particularly on those modules that are research-informed. The amount of firsts achieved is therefore very impressive. Feedback and moderation is also to be commended particularly where there was a disagreement between markers as the final agreed mark always carried a rationale for the outcome. There was therefore a good, reflective approach when applying the assessment criteria.
