Modern languages have been taught at Cardiff University since it first opened its doors in 1883 and our offering continues to grow from strength to strength.

Compared to this long-standing history, I'm a relative newcomer, having started at the university in 2018, before becoming Head of School in 2021.

Since joining the school, I have taught at undergraduate level, led one of our MA programmes, and supervised doctoral students. These experiences have shown me the dynamism of the school in terms of its teaching offer, its research culture and its service to students.

Although we're a small community of language learners, our output is far from modest. We think globally and are home to Cardiff's Confucius Institute, which is a collaboration between Cardiff University and Xiamen University. The institute provides high quality Chinese teaching that benefits the academic communities of both universities, but also the communities of Cardiff and surrounding areas with its range of outreach and engagement activities. The Spanish Embassy and Goethe Institute have also chosen us as the home for their satellite offices which is a great honour and a constant opportunity for collaboration.

We are at the forefront of research into modern language learning. Our award-winning Modern Foreign Languages Mentoring Scheme, funded by the Welsh Government, encourages young people to pursue multilingual lives. The approaches we have developed are now being rolled out as examples of best practice in Europe and across other disciplines in England.

Our teaching also sets us apart from other language schools. All our programmes are offered through a transnational lens, which gives us the opportunity to address a range of questions that are of relevance to you, our potential students, who live, work and learn in societies characterised by increasing diversity and ever greater global connectivity.

Our transnational curriculum will allow you to explore the place of the languages and cultures you chose to study in the wider world. I hope this brochure provides you with a snapshot of life at the School of Modern Languages and encourages you to come to meet us at an Open Day and join us when the time comes. I look forward to meeting you in the future.

Professor David Clarke
Head of School

Why study languages?

We're passionate about the power of languages and their impact in personal, educational and economic terms. That passion lies at the heart of everything we do. It drives our degree programmes.

Studying languages or translation opens up your world, unlocking opportunities for discovery and adventure. It enables you to create connections with global communities and cultures and is a gateway to exciting and varied careers spanning countries and continents.

There has never been a better time for you to study languages. Our degrees have been carefully designed to meet the demand for language skills in a range of different sectors, equipping graduates with the strong modern foreign language skills which open doors to a host of different career paths.

We're endlessly proud of our graduates and what they go on to achieve. Our graduates work in diplomacy, IT, international sport, manufacturing, the armed services, accountancy, law, financial analysis, management consultancy and international business. The list is endless!

Our degrees are tailored to you. We recognise that you have different linguistic interests and career aims. So, we've worked hard to ensure those different interests are reflected in the range and diversity of our module options and pathways. And we'll champion your interests and abilities throughout your time with us, ensuring we do all we can to help you succeed.

Languages transform careers and educational paths, but they also transform lives. Most of our undergraduates work, study or teach abroad in their third year. A highlight for many, it can be challenging, yes, and a learning curve, but in the best possible ways. Graduates tell us about the big and small adventures they enjoyed while studying or working abroad: the friendships they made, the places they discovered, the cultures they embraced, and the life lessons they accumulated. They also tell us about how a year abroad has enhanced their CV, demonstrating their independence, resilience, communication skills, problem-solving capacities, and confidence.

We love to see where languages take our undergraduates.

Come and find out where they might take you . . .

Studying with us - language, community and culture

Be part of our community

We are one of the most dynamic language schools in the UK and we pride ourselves on the close-knit community that we've cultivated between staff and students to ensure that both thrive. We have approximately 800 students and 60 academic staff and all our teaching takes place at our central location on Park Place, Cardiff.

The high regard in which we are held is reflected in the relationships we've cultivated outside the university. Both the Spanish Embassy and Goethe Institute have chosen our school as a location for satellite offices and we are also home to Cardiff Confucius Institute.

Flexible study options

We offer a variety of programmes, with the option of studying two languages side-by-side.

However, if you'd like to study languages but are also interested in other subjects, a joint honours programme could be exactly what you are looking for.

By studying 2 subjects in different environments you automatically gain a different perspective. You'll experience varied teaching and assessment styles and will learn flexibility; a quality increasingly required within the job market.

We work with several schools across the university to provide a suite of exciting and complementary joint honours options.

To help you see what joint honours programmes we offer, we've included a list on every language page.

Focus on the 'transnational'

Instead of thinking about languages as something specific to a country or region, transnational teaching looks at languages and cultures and how they sit in the wider world.

Our curriculum has been cited as innovative best practice in the sector by the University Council of Modern Languages.

It has been designed as a clear and coherent learning arc that scaffolds you as you progress. This ensures that you build skills and knowledge that allow you to progressively specialise as you move through your studies.

Year 1 provides a broad base of studies which equips you for immersion into the language and cultures you have chosen. From year 2, you'll have real choice in following different specialisations, from cultural studies, to translation, to the world and language of business.

This prepares you for your year abroad, and for specialised research-led study in the final year. What we teach in the final year of our programmes has been co-produced with our students; ensuring that you are at the heart of everything we do.

A modern languages degree at Cardiff University has four broad aims of development:

- near native competency in the language(s) studied
- an in-depth understanding of the politics, economy, society, history and culture of the countries whose languages are studied
- a global vision, allied to a high level ability to mediate between cultures, and to understand how different cultures intersect and interrelate
- high quality transferable skills of independent problem solving, written and oral communication and analytical skills that will make you highly attractive to prospective employers

Studying abroad - skills for life, and life experiences

Immersing yourself in a culture and interacting with native speakers is the best way to develop and improve your language skills. In your third year, you'll have the opportunity to do this when you spend time abroad either working, studying or taking part in the British Council's English Language Assistant Scheme in a country where your chosen language is spoken.

We have developed partnerships with a range of excellent universities which means you can study in some of the most iconic and inspiring cities around the world. Students have previously travelled to Paris, Berlin, Milan and Barcelona, as well as many other destinations across Europe.

Students studying Spanish also have the option to spend their year abroad further afield in Latin America in locations which have included Lima in Peru and Guadalajara in Mexico. Students who have chosen to study Japanese have had the opportunity to study in universities in Tokyo, Kyoto, Beppu, Saitama, Hiroshima, Kobe, Kitakyushu and Yokohama.

Alternatively, you can take advantage of the British Council's English Language Assistant Scheme. Every year, around 2,500 language assistants from the UK support the teaching of English in 14 countries around the world. The British Council provides you with training in your destination country and this opportunity provides excellent experience and enables you to earn a salary while you are away.

The flexibility, independence and problem solving skills that you develop during your year abroad are often cited by employers as a major reason for employing language graduates.

The options to study or work abroad are plenty, with students heading to countries and regions where their chosen language is used. You can find Cardiff University students sampling the patisseries of Paris, strolling in the shadows of the Brandenburg Gate in Berlin, exploring Machu Picchu in Peru or soaking up the art and culture of Florence. One of my favourite stories is from one of our students who, when completing his politics studies at Mexico City University, also travelled across the country as the lead singer of a rock band. Each person's experience is unique to them and their location, but the universal takeaway is life skills, global connections and lots of fun.

Admissions

Gain practical experience while you study

Student Teaching module

We provide you with the opportunity to gain experience in teacher training via an optional module in your final year.

The Student Teaching module allows you to go into local secondary schools and teach pupils who are learning foreign languages. You'll have the opportunity to observe teaching by professionals, take part in classroom activities and generate new learning materials. This in turn enhances your ICT, presentation, preparatory and organisational skills and, ultimately, your employability.

If you're hoping to become a teacher after university this valuable experience can be used to feed into your PGCE application. We offer a dedicated (optional) training session for PGCE applications with an expert in the field.

Inside Out

We have provided final year students with the optional opportunity to work with prisoners. Inside Out is an educational exchange in which semester-long modules are delivered to mixed classes of imprisoned learners and undergraduates inside HMP Cardiff. This transformative form of teaching works by breaking down boundaries. Both groups of learners were put in spaces that neither would normally inhabit which placed them on an equal footing.

The scheme was mutually beneficial to the university and the prison, improving the experience and opportunities of both prisoners and undergraduates.

Modern Foreign Languages Student Mentoring Scheme

The Modern Foreign Languages Student Mentoring Scheme was launched in 2015. The scheme places undergraduates from Cardiff, Swansea, Bangor and Aberystwyth Universities into local schools to mentor pupils and encourage them to consider modern foreign languages when choosing their GCSE options.

As a student mentor, you'll undertake weekly mentoring and coaching sessions for your pupil mentees in small groups across the academic year.

This scheme has achieved great success, working with nearly half of all secondary schools in Wales. Partner schools have reported on average a doubling in the number of pupils choosing languages at GCSE, as well as improved motivation to continue studying and go to university.

Know that you'll be supported

You'll be assigned a personal tutor for the duration of your degree, who will be a member of academic staff from the school. If you are studying a joint honours programme you'll have a personal tutor in each school. Personal tutors are there to advise on academic and personal matters in a confidential and informal manner.

Your personal tutor will also supply references in support of any applications you may make for jobs or postgraduate courses.

In addition to your personal tutor, you'll be supported by our Student Cases and Support team, whose role is to provide advice on procedures and regulations that affect your studies and sign-posting to the relevant student support services. If you have a disability, long-term health condition or specific learning difficulty, the Student Cases and Support team alongside our Academic Disability Officer will be able to support you throughout your studies.

After graduating, I went straight into employment at Cardiff City FC as a Player Liaison Officer where I used my language skills every day. This involved activities such as translating team-talks for our first team players to planning trips for our scouts to go and find the next big players. Without a doubt, my time at Cardiff has been instrumental in helping me along my career path.

Our degree programmes

Chinese

Chinese is the world's most widely spoken language. Learning Chinese and spending time in China will introduce you to a new world of history and tradition, culture and cuisine.

Why study Chinese?

China is the world's second biggest economy and is poised for further growth. It is one of the largest trading partners of the United States and most East and Southeast Asian countries.

Our 4-year Chinese (BA) programme enables you to spend years 1 and 2 in Cardiff, building an extensive understanding of Mandarin Chinese as well as Chinese culture and history. You'll spend the third year abroad at one of our partner institutions in China, before returning to Cardiff for your final year of study.

French

French language and culture have been centre-stage in European and world affairs for centuries.

Why study French?

In the new globalised world, French is more important than ever before and the ability to communicate in the language is an invaluable skill. Not only are there exciting career opportunities within Europe for those with a degree in French, but the excellent communications and intercultural skills you'll acquire are highly desired by multinational organisations worldwide.

French is an official language of 29 countries, of all United Nations agencies, and of many other international organisations. It is considered the international language of diplomacy, and is second only to English in its influence.

French is spoken across the globe as a native or second language by up to half a billion people. The French speaking world extends across the globe from Europe to North Africa, Asia and the Americas.

On completion of a 4-year course in French, you'll have a high level of proficiency in French, as well as a critical understanding of key aspects of modern and contemporary French and Francophone culture. You'll also be aware of the ways in which France has shaped, and been shaped by, other cultures, nations, and communities.

The third year of this course offers a fantastic opportunity to live in a French-speaking environment.

You'll either undertake a work placement at a business, work as a paid teaching assistant in a school or attend a university. Established exchange programmes provide exciting opportunities to study in French cities including Montpellier and Nantes while some of our students have spent their year abroad in Brussels, Geneva and Quebec.

I love the course as well as the student life. There's a great balance between the two. Cardiff University helps you transition from A-levels to being a university student and that's what makes Cardiff a really good university.

French and Japanese (BA)

German

German is one of the key languages in international business, with nearly 100 million native speakers.

Why study German?

German language skills are highly desirable for employers in international business in a wide range of fields including finance, marketing, translating, teaching, media, arts, publishing, and civil service.

Language and culture are inseparable, and students will no doubt discover that there is more to German speaking culture than most think.

The unique heritages and histories of Germany, Austria and Switzerland have played an important role in the development of the West. Taught by native speakers, all of our German courses provide comprehensive language training combined with the opportunity to explore the cultures, literatures and intellectual histories of German-speaking countries. We are also home to the Goethe Institute which has a satellite office in our school.

Italian

Italy is the home of the design and fashion industries as well as being one of the world leaders in the arts, cinema, architecture and music.

Why study Italian?

Italian opens up a host of opportunities to work in both the public and private sectors in Europe. The unique communications and intercultural skills that language graduates develop are in high demand by employers in the fields of teaching, fine arts, banking, the media, tourism and law to name a few. Italy is a leading force in fields such as engineering and architecture. It is also the home of the design and fashion industries. Understanding Italian means that you can explore some of the major contributions to European cultural life, including film and literature, in their native language.

With a rich history dating back to the Roman era, Italy has significantly influenced the development of Europe.

Our courses in Italian offer you the chance not only to learn the language to a high level of proficiency, but also explore the culture that has shaped the social landscape of this inspiring country. You'll have the opportunity to investigate how Italy shaped Europe, and how Italy has intersected with other cultures, diasporas and nations. We apply innovative methodologies in our teaching, including small group activities and constant discussion, with the support of native Italian teachers and exchange students.

One of the most exciting elements of this course is the opportunity to study or work in Italy during the third year. Many students choose to study in some of Italy's most inspiring cities, including Florence, Milan, Trieste, Verona and Venice. Others prefer to experience island life, working or studying in Sardinia or Sicily.

Japanese

A modern Asian language shaped by ancient customs and culture.

Why study Japanese?

A joint honours degree in Japanese offers exciting prospects for anyone interested in Japan. With the huge amount of Japanese investment and interest in UK-based manufacturing, finance and marketing, the link with Japan continues to be a healthy one that is likely to foster many career opportunities for those fluent in Japanese.

Contemporary Japan is founded on a rich and fascinating cultural history that stretches back thousands of years. It remains a major economic power as well as an innovator in the fast-moving automotive and electronic industries.

Japanese can be studied as part of a joint honours degree and can be combined with business studies, French, German, Italian, Spanish, or translation.

By the end of the course, you'll be proficient in the Japanese language, as well as having an excellent understanding of life and culture in Japan. You'll also understand how Japan has shaped and been shaped by its relations with other cultures.

There is an opportunity to spend time in Japan during your third year and immerse yourself in Japanese culture and language. During this year, you'll develop a high level of language skills in order to complete an advanced language course in your final year in Cardiff. Please note, due to Japanese visa restrictions, those who enrol onto a Japanese programme are unable to work in Japan during their year abroad. As a consequence, you'll spend time studying at a Japanese university instead.

Portuguese

One of the world's most widely-spoken languages, especially important for international business and politics.

Why study Portuguese?

Portuguese is one of the most important languages for international business and politics, spoken by more than 260 million people worldwide. The official language of 9 countries on 4 continents, Portuguese is also increasingly used as a community and second language in the USA, Europe and Australasia. A degree in Portuguese could take you across the world!

We offer specially-developed courses for students at advanced and beginner levels.

Regular contact with native speakers will support you in building fluency and awareness of different forms of Portuguese.

You'll also learn about the vibrant cultures and societies of the contemporary Portuguese-speaking world, from Europe to Latin America, Africa and Asia. You'll explore the intersections between different Portuguese communities, and their relationships with other languages and cultures.

Our innovative teaching methodologies and supportive environment cater for diverse learners and develop your skills so that you'll be ready to take advantage of the wide range of employment prospects that a degree in Portuguese can open up. The degree provides the perfect opportunity to study Portuguese along with French, German, Italian, Spanish and Translation.

The year abroad is an opportunity to enhance and deepen your linguistic fluency and cultural understanding, and to see, in real life, the cultures that you have studied. Many students choose to study or work in Portugal but others have travelled further afield to placements in Brazil.

Our programme is supported by Camões Instituto da Cooperação e da Língua.

Spanish

A language with a global reach, shaped by a culturally diverse heritage.

Why study Spanish?

Spanish is an important European language which also has a global reach. Latin American countries in particular are now integral players in international trade, meaning that the Spanish language is more important than ever. Speaking Spanish allows you to explore the vibrant cultures and politics of the Hispanic world.

There is high demand for Spanish graduates from multinational employers who value the language, communications and intercultural skills that are developed through language degrees. A Spanish course can open up a range of exciting career opportunities in fields such as international politics or business, consultancy, sales and marketing, finance, teaching, and translating/interpreting.

With approximately 400 million native speakers in more than 20 countries where Spanish is an official language, Español is one of the three international languages in the world. Today Spanish is spoken in many parts of Europe, South America, Africa, and increasingly in the USA.

By the end of your course, you'll have a near-fluent command of the Spanish language as well as an in-depth understanding of Hispanic culture and society, in Europe and across the Hispanic world. You'll explore the cultural intersections between different Spanish-speaking cultures, and their interactions with other cultures and languages.

During the third year, you'll have a fantastic opportunity to improve your spoken and written language, immerse yourself in another culture or gain work experience in a Spanish-speaking country. Many choose to study at one of our many partner universities in Spain or Latin America, or gain work experience as a teaching assistant in a Spanish school.

I carried out a year abroad as part of my degree. I undertook a study placement in Toulouse, France during the first semester and then in Granada, Spain during the second. I consider it to be one of the best years of my life and although it sounds like a cliché, doing a year abroad definitely does change you as a person! However, it obviously did not go without some challenges along the way, and for this reason a skill that I developed was the ability to be more resilient and solve problems in a more effective, efficient way.

Translation

Study translation with a modern language and learn professional translation skills.

Why study translation?

As well as receiving practical and in-depth language tuition, you'll be given translation specific skills not available on traditional language courses. These skills will allow you to carve out a particular career path and act as an excellent foundation for a foothold in the translation industry. Specialist modules introduce the different institutional contexts you may encounter in your future careers (government, media, multinational business) and alert you to some of the real challenges of the translation profession such as time-management, managing resources, establishing and maintaining networks.

There is an increasing demand for translation skills in the UK and worldwide. We offer specialist translation programmes that provide you with theoretical, vocational and practical translation skills, alongside the opportunity to gain an excellent command of either 1 or 2 modern languages and cultures.

Our translation curriculum (in line with the Institute of Linguists and the Institute for Translators and Interpreters standards) will focus on combining the theory behind translation with methodology and practical skills.

These unique courses offer:

- a good foundation in one or two languages and cultures (French, German, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Chinese and Japanese)
- a translation curriculum in line with standards set by professional bodies
- generic and specialised translation skills in areas such as legal, commercial and scientific translation
- two ways to study. You can choose to study for 3 years or study for 4 years and spend a year abroad

I've liked having specific classes for different things. For example, in Spanish, there's grammar, translation and conversation classes so it's very clear what you're going to be having on each day. It's useful because whatever you do in the grammar class is normally continued in the conversation class, so you get to put it into practise.
