Food Power has been influential in changing how food poverty is addressed: Food Power enables alliances to evaluate their impact:

- 78% of alliances agree Food Power encouraged them to pursue activities to address the root causes of food poverty.

Food Power supports alliances to share learning across the UK to enhance responses to food poverty:

- 94% of alliances said Food Power positively impacted their progress.

Food Power promotes involvement of people who have experienced food poverty and gives them a platform:

- 100% of alliances engaged with support offered by Food Power.

- 75% of alliances say Food Power influenced them to involve experts by experience.

Independent evaluation found:

- 85 alliances around the UK have registered and most now have a food poverty action plan.
- “Working with a range of community partners under the alliance umbrella ensured co-creation of solutions and maximised resource and capacity.”
- 78% of alliances delivered local evaluation pilots and co-developed the Food Power Collective Impact Tracker.

Stakeholders agree Food Power combines connection to action on the ground with a national perspective to make a unique impact:

- “Everyone wanted to listen to us. These people want to listen to what I’ve got to say!”
- “We are a stronger voice together and more credible as a result.”
- “Having shared visions and messages by larger and larger cohorts of organisations is incredibly powerful. And that’s how you’ll see change happen.”

Food Power helps alliances develop and coordinate action to reduce food poverty:

- “Food Power has raised our aspirations and encouraged us to improve our practices.”
- “Evaluation gives us areas for improvement, areas we’re not tackling, to be able to go out on the ground and support people.”

All figures are from the final survey of alliances which had a 41% response rate. All quotations are from alliances or stakeholders who participated in evaluation research. Full details of all evaluation findings are at www.sustainweb.org/foodpower.
