We are delighted to offer students the opportunity to undertake their medical degree in north Wales. This new stream of the C21 programme will deliver a totally unique learning experience. Within the beautiful surroundings of north Wales, the programme will stimulate students to become excellent doctors willing to become embedded within local, or similar communities in Wales.

Delivering Cardiff University’s C21 programme in collaboration with the School of Medical and Health Sciences, Bangor University.
We aim to train the very best doctors for Wales and more widely in the UK by providing high quality teaching, and an inspiring learning experience based around increased clinical contact. We are excited to mirror the well-established C21 MBBCh course delivered by the School of Medicine at Cardiff University with our colleagues at the School of Medical and Health Sciences, Bangor University.

The 4 year programme in Bangor is an exciting innovation in medical education in Wales, where you can take advantage of:

- Smaller teaching groups with more contact time
- Excellent teaching at the School of Medical and Health Sciences, Bangor University
- Award winning clinical teaching at the University Health Board, top rated by our medical students
- Focus on community medicine through a range of experiences - coastal, small towns, farming, mountain medicine, large teaching hospitals
- Benefit from the latest facilities and technology, including the newly built anatomy and interprofessional learning clinical skills suite and anatomage table.

The programme will entail:

- Year 2: Case Based Learning and community clinical sessions with GPs
- Year 3: Full year placement at a GP surgery
- Year 4: Three hospital placements experiencing the range of specialties in the largest health board in Wales
- Year 5: A mix of GP and hospital placements to transition to the foundation programme

This programme (A102) accepts applications from high performing graduates from our recognised Graduate Entry Programme feeder stream courses:

1. BMedSci (Hons) Medical Sciences, Bangor University (B100)
2. BSc (Hons) Medical Sciences, University of South Wales (B901)
3. BSc (Hons) Medical Pharmacology, Cardiff University (B210)
4. BSc (Hons) Biomedical Sciences, Cardiff University (BC97)

Students successfully completing Year 1 of the A100 programme based in Cardiff may also apply to complete their MBBCh in north Wales.

Interested? Get in touch...

If you want to be part of this unique learning experience and make a real impact on the lives of people in north Wales contact our dedicated Admissions Team for C21 north Wales.

medadmissions@cardiff.ac.uk  +44 (0)29 2068 8113